HAIR RENEWER

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care. Its effects are its wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff. It gives the head a cooling, soothing sensation of great comfort, and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effective or desirable.

A. A. Hayes, M. D., State Assessor of Massachusetts, says: "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the Best Preparation for its intended purposes."

Price, One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectively produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Manufactured by R. P. Hall & Co., NASHUA, N. H.

Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.

The Supreme Court of Illinois has finally rendered a decision in the famous Cass county seat case. The decision sustains the action of the lower court and gives Virginia the county seat.

The Republicans of California hold their State convention for the nomination of candidates for Governor and other State officials, on Thursday of this week. From present indications the Independent movement in California has spent its force, and the real contest will be between the Democratic and Republican, as of old.

The London Medical Press and Circular says the most gloomy forebodings exist in medical circles in India regarding the cholera. Its special correspondent affirms that the deaths have already been far in excess of the usual number at this season, and that, judging by past experience, a terrible visitation seems inevitable during the summer.

As a consequence of Gov. Weston's attempt to seat two Democratic Senators in the New Hampshire Legislature by force and fraud, the election of his successor is postponed and he still retains the Governorship. This is a remarkably flagrant case of "false pretense," but we have seen no Democratic condemnation of it yet, neither do we expect to.

The New York Tribune, in speaking of the business outlook in that city says: "A revival of trade is manifest. There has come a rapid development of retail business and leading houses find their sales much exceeding those of May last year. In fact, the general testimony is that the spring trade has put a quietus on the cry of 'hard times'."

A new order has recently been established at Ottawa, Ill., to be known as the "Knights of '76," and a certificate of organization has been applied for from the Secretary of State. The object of the new society is said to be "to inculcate and practice the doctrines of the patriots of 1776, and those who followed in the earlier history of the government." The real object probably, is a political one.

James Morrill, of the United States District Court, in a case brought before him at Galveston, Texas, found the proprietor of a theater guilty of a violation of the civil rights bill in refusing to admit two colored women to the parquette, and sentenced him to pay a fine of five hundred dollars. The Galveston News, Confederate organ, criticized the action of the judge, and now he has issued a citation for the proprietors of that journal to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt.

THE Democratic papers are very severe on the Republican members of the New Hampshire Legislature for their action in connection with the contested seats in the Senate. Their course has been to file their protests against the action of Gov. Weston in giving certificates of election to candidates who had received a minority vote, and to request the Supreme Court to give an opinion on the question at as early a day as possible. We suppose it would be more to the taste of these critics to have the case managed after the Louisiana White League fashion but Republicans are law-abiding people, and neither propose to seize their seats with revolvers in their hands nor intend to submit to wrong. Their reference of the case to the Supreme Court is in striking contrast with the scene in the Louisiana Legislature on the 4th of January last, when the Democratic "White Leaguers" attempted to obtain control of the House by mob violence, and even called upon the military to assist them in their nefarious scheme.

Dispatches from the regions visited by the grasshopper appear to show that although many counties will suffer greatly, still the danger of an absolute and general failure of the crops is not probable. Rain storms have diminished the insect plagues in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas. In Iowa, the grasshoppers are moving away, and it is feared that the farmers in some districts are repairing the damage done to their crops. Fortunately, the season has been backward, and the even in general has begun to spring up again as the grasshoppers are destroyed by the storm or move to other quarters.

Evarts has Reached the End.

THE RECENT ROBBERY OF THE TREASURY.

Banquet to Carl Schurz, at Berlin.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE MURDER.

Homicide in Tazewell Co.

NEW YORK, June 8.—In the Beecher trial this morning, Evarts continued summing up. He began by saying that the controversy was ended if Tracy's narrative of his interview at Moulton's, in 1872, was accepted as correct. This interview was brought about by Tilton and Moulton for their own purposes, and for those purposes an honest explanation of the situation was required. They both denied that the "True Story" was read in that interview, although Tilton admitted he read it to Tracy about that period. This was the only occasion for his reading, under the pretense that the "True Story" was designated as the Woodhull scandal.

Evarts again took up and justified Tracy's course in this case, and took occasion to say that Tilton, in his interviews with Tracy, refused to accede to any proposition to bring the matter before a respectable committee, as he always shrink from investigation until it was unavoidable; he knew that when daylight was let in, the exposure of his own and Moulton's treacherous conduct, in contrast with Beecher's boldness, would leave no doubt in the minds of honest men as to what had been going on these years.

When Tracy was first asked to enter into consultation, he stipulated that he should enter as a friend to Beecher, and not be placed in hostile position to him. Then Tilton spoke of the etiquette of the legal profession, and in answer to his inquiries, Tracy said he would not act as counsel for Beecher in litigation of the case they submitted to him. Tilton then told his case, and Tracy said it was not one which involved legal proceedings. When it appeared that Tilton was to bring a new charge against Beecher, Tracy notified him that he should not be bound in regard to that by his promise in regard to the old case. He told Tilton he was not pledged in regard to adultery and a lawsuit, by what had been stipulated as to a case which contained no adultery, and was grounds for no lawsuit.

Evarts then spoke of the "ragged edge" letter, showing how cunningly Tilton and Moulton had begun to work on Beecher's feelings in respect to the injuries he thought he had done to Tilton. It was strange this letter did not appear to have been answered by Moulton, though it called for an answer had there been any sincerity in the pretended relations of Moulton and Beecher.

Beecher didn't know that Tilton was going around as a tale-bearer. Counsel read from the "ragged edge" letter, Beecher's description of the difficulties that surrounded him. Counsel explained: "I am ready to step down and out, if my destination will save Tilton, I am ready for the sacrifice." He said that moment if Tilton would renounce the policy of silence he was ready, as he said in the June letter, to step down from his pulpit, if investigation would come. Counsel argued that this letter was inconsistent with guilt, for a guilty man does not voluntarily parade his guilt in writing.

Evarts then reviewed Bowen's and Mrs. Moulton's testimony, after which the court took the usual recess. Mr. Evarts continued never recess. He agreed that there was no consciousness between these two men of fault on the part of Beecher, except what he himself acknowledged. He referred to Beecher's final decision on that Sunday morning when he said he had resolved to content no longer, that Tilton's character was such as to leave no hope for the future. This, Evarts explained, meant that Beecher had found that the policy of silence, despite all the burdens it had imposed, didn't secure its object. Mr. Evarts asked, "What was there of guilt in Beecher's letter?" The improbability of an adulterer writing such a letter was self-evident.

Referring to Moulton's remark, that Beecher could find the whole case published, Evarts asked, "Could Moulton find any man suppose the minister of any Christian church could maintain his standing if he stood narrowly convicted of adultery?" Moulton went on to state that Beecher had not sustained him, as he ought, and that, if he depended on Beecher's help alone, his hands would have long ago dropped powerless by his side. That, Evarts said, was the truth, if Beecher's conception of the right way to treat this case had been followed, Moulton's hands would have dropped by his side long ago, and they would never have got into Beecher's pockets. [Laughter.]

Evarts remarked that whenever Tilton proposed anything for any one else to sign, there was somewhere in it a certificate to his honor. Beecher did not need such certificates. Evarts then referred to the alleged conversation between Beecher and Mrs. Moulton, on June 24, in which he said he was robbed of all credit by the alibi, which had been, he said, conclusively proved. After rehearsing the evidence on this point, he affirmed that even though the prosecution's case were accepted it would be fatal to them, for it proved that the interview lasted but a short time, while Mrs. Moulton swore it lasted several hours. He compared the fictive manner of Mrs. Moulton on the witness stand with the frankness of Mrs. Ovington.

Mrs. Moulton might have given not what Beecher said, but what she imagined it was, and she might have explained some of her wonder at Evarts's idea in coming to stay, with a reference to her health. Counsel then reviewed the character of the interview on the Saturday Mrs. Moulton tells us that Beecher, in these random conversations, never did her the facts of the case, so we might as well about the facts in her mind.

Evarts continued speaking after the hour of adjournment. Counsel could not understand the rocesses of a woman's heart, but could understand that in review. He credited her with trying to save her husband's reputation. He commented on having gone to Mrs. Woodhull's three times to bring that woman for conference with her husband and Tilton, and of having received her often. To this, of course, we apparent the most absolute subject of the vile and the absolute tyranny of the husband and master, who swore he would make it hotter than hell for anybody that opposed him.

After an intermission of five minutes, during which the jurors took a turn out of the court room, the argument was resumed. (On Tilton's "True Story," and Beecher's letter, read to his church in July, 1871, the jury might rest their verdict. The law excluded two persons from the witness stand, Mrs. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton. He argued to prove that the opposing counsel had a sinister motive in making a show of allowing Mrs. Tilton to testify. If they believed she would testify in their favor why didn't they call her. His survey of the evidence, the counsel trusted, had brought before the jury the general force and logic of it. Beecher had withstood a rigid cross examination and answered questions proposed by Tilton, and suggested by long and unfriendly observation of his actions, and he had denied every form of guilt with Mrs. Tilton. Defendant stood their conscious of the truth and unwilling to abstain from the truth, and as men of unquestioned truth and every department of life under the burning criticisms of men, and there is nothing in our jurisprudence that does not and the case. Verdict for the plaintiff strikes into the heart of his wife and breaks the heart of this noble wife of Beecher, destroys his own good name, dishonors our community and strikes a blow at the dignity of human nature. The poverty of plaintiff caused him to make an accusation against his wife's honor. How does this case compare with Beecher's character? His life, on boyhood to the present day open and public, generous, kind, devoted, noble and true; you do not need much time in reading out that of a selfish act of seduction does not match with the kind, loving, generous heart of Henry Ward Beecher. [Applause.] A good man is always a chameleon to acts of fraud.

Gratified himself by sonorous voices that described his downfall, but there is one higher authority and in much simpler phrase, a blunt old description of the downfall accompanied with the moral to be drawn from it. "Now he who hearken these sayings of mine and doeth them I will liken to a wise man that built his house upon a rock and the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon that house and it fell not for it was founded upon a rock." Did ever the rains descend, and floods come and winds blow about the fabric of a man's character and life as now for these four years upon the character and life of Henry Ward Beecher, and does every one know that the reason the structure did not fall was that it was built on a rock of ethical belief, in the saying of the founder of our religion and of ethical adhesion in the work of his life to these sayings: "And he that heareth the sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him to a wise man who built his house upon the sand, and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house, and it fell, and great was the fall thereof."

You will at all such men, at all times, and now, if your honor please, we must acknowledge with respectful deference the disposition and order of this column and its contents. To the parties, to this community, to the present life in Christendom, to all future of history, and to recognize edge that it there be any misreading of justice, your skills will be clear of it.

And you, gentlemen of the jury, have done your duty as far as citizens error do. You have been taken from your employments, your names and in many instances perhaps in some degree from your lives' heads. And every day and every hour, from the beginning to the end, you have given to the witnesses and to the counsel the honor of your patient, interested, indulgent attention, and in your verdict you will find, and we shall find, with joy, that the truth matches all around, and your verdict will be no exception. [Loud applause.]

COURT ADJOURNED.

CONCORD, N. H., June 8.—This afternoon the two houses of the Legislature notified the Governor that both branches were organized. The House passed a resolution fixing to-morrow for the election of a Governor, but the Senate refused to pass a similar resolution. It is believed that a question as to the possibility of legally electing an Executive will be raised.

AN OLD MAN.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The hundredth birthday of Father Henry Boehm, of the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference, and the seventy-sixth of his ministry, was celebrated to-day.

BERLIN, June 8.—The banquet given to-night in honor of Carl Schurz was attended by eighty gentlemen, among whom were forty Americans. Mr. Thompson presided, and proposed toasts to the German Emperor and President of the United States. Ex-Senator Schurz toasted Germany and made speeches in German and English. He was repeatedly cheered.

CONCORD, N. H., June 8.—George H. Howell, President of the seceding Republican Senate, received this morning a copy of the opinion of the Supreme Court on the Senatorial question, accompanied by a letter from Chief Justice Cushing, stating that the court could not recognize any body claiming to be the Senate other than that organized by the selection of the Hon. Mr. Sanborn as President.

The Republicans are not wholly satisfied, claiming that the opinion does not touch the main points at issue, the alleged assumption of duties by the executive not proscribed by the President or fundamental law. They held a caucus on the subject this noon. The policy they have adopted has not transpired. It is thought the seceding Senate will return this afternoon and that the business of electing a Governor in joint convention will be proceeded with. The Democrats claim that there can be no election now, as the time prescribed by the constitutional limit is passed. It is not known whether any serious conflict over this point will be made.

PERKINS, June 8.—Samuel Willard and Henry Ziegenbein, farmers, near Hainesville, in this county, have been at enmity for a long time. Law suits and disputes have been frequent among them. Yesterday they were at Perkins together and quarreled. This morning Ziegenbein went to see Willard and made threats. Willard got his shot-gun, and fired both barrels into Ziegenbein, who fell a corpse. Willard gave himself up and was imprisoned.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—One of the theories suggested by which the recent Treasury robbery was effected; is that the money was lifted to the balcony surrounding the inner part of the 2d story of the cash-room, by means of a steel hook attached to a fine wire in the hands of the robber, who dexterously hooked the envelope in which the 47,000 dollars were. A similar sharp practice has been successfully worked in other instances. This theory is advanced by those who believe the money was stolen by outside parties.

TREASURER SPINNER is still of the opinion that the larceny was committed by an employee.

TOPEKA, KANSAS, June 8.—Alex. Ramsey, Deputy U. S. Marshal, was killed at Stockton, Kansas, a few miles south of Fort Hays, yesterday morning. He was attempting to arrest two horse thieves when he discovered stolen ponies, when one of the parties shot him in the abdomen, and he died in about an hour afterwards. After being wounded Ramsey succeeded in killing the man who shot him. The other one escaped.

A correspondent of a Chicago paper having over-zealously telegraphed that the census law in the Revised Statutes of 1845 was yet in force, and thereby created a wrong impression upon the public mind, it should be stated that the Attorney-General has given a verbal opinion that the census law is repealed, hence it is plain that there is no State law authorizing the taking of the census.

The long-contested Cass county seat question has at last been settled. The Supreme Court of the State, now in session at Mt. Vernon, has decided the matter in favor of Virginia City and against Bonadown, the old county seat.

DEMOCRATIC POLICY.

The Democratic party has singular ideas of government. It set upon the principle that the general government possesses no power to do good; in fact that it is a do-nothing organization; an ornament to society and an asylum for office holders. They have always opposed all improvements by the general government which are not immediately connected with salt water. They evidently regarded all encouragement to improvements by the government as pernicious, but supposed that salt would operate as a saving clause in the class to which they assented. The New York Graphic, a Democratic journal with independent proclivities, thinks that party must change its position on this subject if it would secure the confidence of the people. It contends that the monopolies of which the people complain so bitterly, are the legitimate offspring of Democratic policy, and that that party must favor such policy as will enable the government to protect the people against transportation and other extensive monopolies. In short it plainly sees that the old Whig and Republican doctrine of Internal Improvements is wise and popular. The power may be abused, but that the people may greatly be benefited by judicious encouragement and assistance in improvements affecting the interests of a large extent of territory, there cannot be a doubt; and it is equally true that beneficial results must flow from proper checks upon the greed of soulless corporations.—Toledo Blade.

AN ORDINANCE.

To prevent the ringing of bells, and the announcement of news by outcry upon the streets, alleys or sidewalks.

SECTIONS 1. Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Decatur, That no person or persons shall by himself or herself, his, her or their agent, employee, clerk or servant, upon any street, alley or sidewalk in said city of Decatur, proclaim, announce or advertise by outcry, or by the ringing of any bell or the blowing of a horn, or the beating of a drum, his, her, or their business, or any sale or sales at auction or otherwise.

SEC. 2. Any person violating any of the provisions of section one of this ordinance shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

SEC. 3. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and legal publication.

Passed June 7th, 1875.

We understand that the accident which happened to Fred Smith and Driver yesterday was occasioned by driving. As we learn it the mule belonging to D. M. Barnett & Co. upon behind Peters' team and attempted to pass the latter; whereupon, whipped up his horse and put him a rapid run, and while going at a rate attempted to make the turn in our issue of yesterday. Now above version of the matter is a and the owner of the killed horse driving at a rapid pace in violation of the city ordinance, he has only to blame for his loss, and we have it suggested that both he and the of the mule team deserve to be fast driving.
